Officially known as the House of Gucci, this Italian clothing line has looks everyone will be envious of. When you think Gucci, you think about sophistication, timeless style, the ultimate in luxury and one of the biggest names in fashion. Guccio Gucci was born in 1881 in northern Italy and initially created a saddle shop in 1906 featuring leather crafted goods. Guccio had worked for some time at the Hotel Savoy in London. While there he had learned much about leather craftsmanship, and he bought those design sensibilities and love of quality into his business, only hiring those with master craftsmanship skills. The shop soon become known for its exclusive and luxurious leather goods; with equestrian inspired leather goods featuring bits and stirrups attracting an international audience. As travel by horses became a thing of the past, Guccio transitioned his line into meeting the needs of the day and in 1921, the iconic House of Gucci was created, a leather goods and fashion clothing company. The Gucci label soon proved so successful that in 1938 Guccio was able to open a boutique in Rome. In 1947, one of the most recognized and iconic staples from the Gucci brand would premiere. Facing a shortage of standard materials due to World War II and the Italian Fascist Dictatorship present at that time, Guccio put his imagination and creativity to work and invented the bamboo handle handbag. The stylish bamboo handle handbag is still sold today. Guccio would also experiment with hemp, linen and other more available materials to make up for the shortage of standard materials. By the early 1950s, Guccio would create suede shoes and the signature green-red-green web material. This web was an immediately identifiable sign of Guccio and was designed from a saddle girth, helping the brand establish more international recognition. Soon, Guccio had veered into creating fashionable clothing for men and women including men's neckties. The hand sewn silk neckties are still in fashion and still worn by men everywhere for a professional look. Classic Gucci ties featuring the companies' logo in striped, checkered and solid colors are available as is the one hundred percent leather Gucci tie. Gucci however, would not live to see some of the biggest successes of his fashion house. Gucci would die in 1953, leaving behind his wife, Aida Calvelli and six children. His four sons: Aldo, Vasco, Ugo and Rodolfo would help their fathers' empire continue to grow. Further expansion came with the opening of stores in Milan, London, Paris, Tokyo, Beverly Hills and Palm Beach. The biggest style icons of the time would also wear Gucci products. Hollywood actress Grace Kelly became known for wearing Gucci silk scarves while first lady Jackie Kennedy started wearing the Gucci shoulder handbag which became known as the Jackie O handbag. Audrey Hepburn and Peter Sellers also helped Gucci become a brand associated with Hollywood glamor. Though family bickering and rapid expansion did impact the brand in the 1980's new blood in the 90s helped reinvigorate and restore the House of Gucci to greatness. The Gucci legacy is still being invented today; not only has the company become the most well known Italian fashion house in the world but it is one of the most profitable fashion companies period. Today Gucci creates handbags, eyeglasses, men's ties, cosmetics, perfume, shoes and more.,, Take a look at your calendar. Notice how quickly the 2011 Holiday Season is approaching? That means it ' s time for the Christmas marketing blitz where we, as consumers, will be inundated with all kinds of commercials and ads telling us that special someone in our lives won ' t be complete without whatever the hot gadget of the moment is. I ' m guessing the Apple 4s will be the big winner there, but nothing has been decided yet. In fact, some of us would rather enjoy Thanksgiving before transitioning to Christmas, but that hasn ' t stopped the big box stores from rolling out their various Holiday Season ad campaigns. Aside: for those of you who want your holidays to go in order, this is for you: In regards to the holiday season commercials, one such big box company, Currys PC World, has that whole " make awesome commercials " down to a science, if the latest offerings are anything to go by. Of course, it could be the geek in me that approves of *most* things Star Wars, or it could be that these commercials are actually pretty awesome. Perhaps it ' s the lack of being beaten over the head with Christmas-related themes in these ads. Whatever the case, Currys nailed these offerings, so much so, in fact, that if they were Currys PC World stores in United States, I ' d consider shopping there before going to Best Buy. Take a look for yourself: There ' s even a " making of " video for the Darth Vader commercial, which is perfect demonstration on how to further leverage the kick-ass content you create: In other news, this isn ' t the first time Currys has been allowed to use George Lucas ' Star Wars intellectual property. It was also used to promote the Blu-Ray release of the Star Wars movies box set: Apparently, Lucas is a big fan of their stores.,, Accessories are way too important with almost everything these days.
